

DESIGN

We're Already Geeking Out Over These Milan Design Week Debuts

From an Ini Archibong sofa that evokes natural stone formations to Kvadrat's curtains inspired by accidental print sheet patterns, keep these hotly anticipated Milan Design Week debuts on your radar.

BY RYAN WADDOUPS

April 05, 2019

As the Italian fashion capital undergoes its annual overnight transformation into a sleepless design mecca, it's easy for your Instagram feeds to quickly become saturated with the latest and greatest product prototypes, immersive installations, and Boomerangs of infamous Negroni Sbagliati clinking at Bar Basso in the wee hours. Below is a first taste of what to expect, but stay tuned for real-time coverage of Milan Design Week's most memorable moments.

SHARE

SHARE

Raw by

The origins of humble earth inspired visionary French designer Noé Duchaufour-Lawrance to mine his own creative memory, which came to be during his childhood spent on the wild coasts of Brittany. He seamlessly transposes the sculptural language of stone into something soft—specifically, an ethereal new collection of rugs crafted in wool, silk, jute, lurex, and Field, one of Tai Ping's enhanced synthetic yarns.

SHARE